The BCS Academy of Computing is a cooperative partnership\(^1\) between BCS, the Council of Professors and Heads of Computing (CPHC) and the UK Computing Research Committee (UKCRC). The Academy of Computing Board reports to BCS Trustee Board.

2 Purpose

The overarching purpose of the Academy is to:

2.1 Advance the creation, study and application of knowledge in computing for the benefit of the public.

This includes, but is not limited to:

2.2 Promote the benefits, successes and challenges of computer science and engineering through public engagement.

2.3 Establish computing as a core academic discipline at every level of education, which is recognised as of equal value to any natural science or engineering discipline and treated accordingly.

2.4 Develop and support a cohesive community inclusive of scholars, researchers and professionals with a shared commitment to the advancement of computing.

3 Key Responsibilities

In support of its purpose the Board will:

3.1 Ensure the Board’s activities meet the objectives of the BCS Royal Charter and comply with all relevant Charity Commission guidance on public benefit\(^2\), and in particular are consistent with the Institute’s strategic objectives.

3.2 Ensure whenever possible the Board prioritises those activities that are of the greatest benefit to the public.

3.3 Promote the BCS, specifically the Academy of Computing, among the various academic, professional and policy stakeholders, and to feed back information to the Academy and to Trustee Board.

3.4 Develop computing as a core discipline within the school curriculum, and support the continual development of school teachers with the intention that all pupils and students have an outstanding computing education.

3.5 Develop and support computer science initiatives that lead to societal and economic benefit for the UK.

\(^1\) The term partnership is not used to denote a legal business relationship in this context

3.6 Develop and support initiatives that promote diversity in education and research.

3.7 Establish relationships with appropriate national and international bodies, including Government departments, other learned societies and industrial research labs, to facilitate and promote computing education and research.

3.8 Establish initiatives that will improve the mechanisms available for effective networking of scholars, researchers and professionals in order to collaborate in the advancement of computing.

3.9 Ensure that Academy activities supporting research should include pure, applied and interdisciplinary research across the different areas within computing.

3.10 Cooperate with the Community Board in fostering closer links between BCS specialist groups, branches and external bodies, in order to support the aims of the Academy.

3.11 Establish Working Groups when appropriate to address specific topics of relevance to the Board. A Working Party should be dissolved once its work has been completed or it reaches the end of its fixed lifetime.

3.12 In collaboration with other parts of the Institute, facilitate expertise to respond to specialised requests for informed opinion.

3.13 Regularly review, and ensure the active promotion of BCS awards, prizes, seminars, lectures and other such activities, so that they support and enhance the Institute's international standing as a leading Learned Institute.

3.14 Manage the development and maintenance of policy relating to the accreditation of academic courses in Higher Education Institutions, and oversee the development and maintenance of criteria against which these academic programmes of study will be accredited.

3.15 The Academy Board oversees the formal appeals processes in respect of accreditation (academic and company based) for the Engineering Council.

3.16 Establish procedures to ensure:

i. an Annual Review and risk assessment is conducted of the effectiveness of the Board in connection with the principal aims of the Board;

vi. the identification of suitable candidates to nominate on behalf of BCS for election as Fellows of the Royal Academy of Engineering and/or the Royal Society on an annual basis. The nomination process is intensive and requires specialist knowledge and must be made in accordance with the Guidance notes provided by the respective academies;
